

NATIONAL EDUCATION SURVEY

1 in 20 students have an FASD. How does that impact your ability to teach?

Take The Survey

- While you may not have a student diagnosed with an FASD in your classroom, statistically, they are there.
- Have you worked with a child with behavior or learning challenges who has not responded well to the usual strategies for children with autism, ADHD, or other disabilities?
- FASD impacts every community, including any neighborhood where alcohol use is common.

We know that students with FASD thrive with the right supports and services.

Data from educators is crucial to inform changes to special education services necessary to support this underserved population.
